Pumpkin Scones May 20, 2012 These Pumpkin Scones are so easy to make and taste great with any type of tea or coffee! I make a few batches of these every year – something that I try to make just for fun and not really as a food blog. Last year I decided to make some Pumpkin Scones with a Vanilla Cream Cheese Icing. They were a hit and I decided to make them again this year. They are great for Easter too – a nice way to put something different on the table for breakfast! The scones are really easy to make. I love using the food processor for this recipe because it makes such a nice even texture. This year I used my Kitchen Aid Mixer which made the process a lot easier and I really liked the feel of it. I also like to use my Kitchenaid stand mixer for the soft dough that I make. I have a few scones recipes that you can check out here, here and here. One thing that I love about this recipe is that it works with any type of pumpkin or pumpkin pie filling. It tastes delicious with the white or the yellow pumpkin pie filling. It is a bit on the tart side for the yellow filling and less sweet for the white filling. They are really easy to make and will keep for a few days in the freezer. I got the idea to make these Pumpkin Scones from Taste of Home. I made them this year and thought they were really good – they were my second favorite recipe of the day. I was really happy that they liked the recipe because I was having a hard time trying to come up with something different. When I was browsing Pinterest one day, I saw some amazing looking pumpkin scones. Since I was in the mood to make something different and would be making them for breakfast, I thought I would try to make them at the same time. I was shocked when I made these Pumpkin Scones at home. They were so different – and delicious! I had to figure out how I could recreate these Pumpkin Scones at home and I found that they were the perfect ones to be able to make at home. The only change that I made this year was to use a cup of white chocolate chips for the white icing. They really added a nice flavor contrast to the whole recipe. Instead of having the white icing, I made them with a mixture of icing and raspberry jam. They tasted so good! These are the
